Hi Families! Spring is here, and with that we are saying “Hello” to new friends, and “Goodbye” to some of our older friends who are moving up to the toddler classes. The first week of April we will be having spring break, and childcare will only be available to those who registered. If you did not register we will look forward to seeing you after the break.

This month we will be about bugs and the different things we may see outside. Our book of the month will be Some Bugs by Angela DiTerlizzi, this is a book about the different things bugs can do and depicts them with bright colors and action words. Our craft will be making butterfly footprints and we will also be learning the ASL sign for butterfly. Finally the song we will be learning is Fly Little Bug.

Finally, I wanted to talk about young children and choice. Young children feel the need to control some aspect of their lives, much of which is decided by adults. Not letting young children have any choice or control over their lives can lead to power struggles or tantrums. When introducing choices it is important to make sure that both choices are acceptable and age appropriate. Giving choices also introduces the concept of independence, which is a key Montessori principle. It is okay to limit the amount of choice a child has. Too many choices can be overwhelming for the child and make it hard to choose. Finally, if something is not a choice it is important to not word it as a yes or no question. Rather, state the child's two options and let them choose from there.
